(1) GET YOUR YOUNG ONES ON TWO-WHEELS. These new mini dirt bikes from OSET are a quick, easy and environmentally friendly way to get your child on two wheels. Based on the design of trials bikes, OSET Spiders are powered by quiet electric motors and are capable of a top speed of 17 mph. They're available in two models to accommodate kids who weigh as little as 50 pounds to kids up to 85 pounds, with a fully functional suspension for these weight ranges. Both models include a speed limiter dial for parents to control their rider. With low seat heights, the riders feel very safe, and the bikes encourage riders to learn real riding techniques.

(2) WHAT'S BETTER THAN A BIKE COVER? A BIKE COVER WITH AN ALARM. Dowco has added interior compartments to its Guardian Weatherall Plus covers that are designed to hold Dowco's exclusive cover alarm. Sold separately, the cover alarm runs on a 9-volt battery and emits a 130-dB warning to scare off potential thieves and vandals. Riders can buy the alarm when they purchase the cover, or choose to add it later. Dowco's cover alarm takes minutes to install and requires no special wiring. The alarm is slipped into an interior compartment near the bottom of the cover, and a tether cord attaches to a spoke in the front or rear tire.

(4) DON'T CRY, IT'S ONLY AN AIR FILTER. This teardrop-shaped air filter from Amsoil utilizes nanofiber technology with a four-year service life guarantee and superior airflow. The product is designed to provide a replacement filter for Baron Big Air Kits and bridges the gap from American Iron to Metric V-twin cruisers. With this product, dust and submicron particles remain on the surface and are trapped in the nanofibers. This produces higher efficiency and higher capacity, extending engine and filter life and reducing engine wear. Nanofiber filters can be cleaned with a vacuum cleaner or low-pressure compressed air.
